

(a)

Fig. S1: Invariance of electrostatic perturbation based on radial distance from active site used to choose interacting residues: In the diphtheria toxin repressor from Corynebacterium diphtheriae, the C-terminal undergoes more electrostatic perturbation compared to the N-terminal, and this change is independent of the radial distance which defines interacting residues.